

Sophie A. Granier, PhD, is a scientific expertise coordinator in the Biotechnology Unit from the Risk Assessment Department at Anses.

Over a couple of decades, she has been involved in various research projects dealing with antimicrobial resistance characterization in bacteria isolated from food, such as Salmonella, Vibrio, Listeria monocytogenes, ... She is appointed on regular basis as expert by ANSES, AFNOR, EFSA, FVI, DG SANTE, ISO ... She has co-authored around 50 international peer-reviewed articles focused on antimicrobial resistance issues.

She used to be head of the French National Reference Laboratory for antimicrobial resistance. She is currently involved in the coordination of the French FAO reference centre for AMR.