

For nearly 20 years, Dr Kylie Hewson has overseen R&D investment, policy development and advocacy for the Australian livestock sector on issues such as biosecurity, food safety, animal health and antimicrobial stewardship. In 2022, Kylie received an Australian Biosecurity Award from the Australian Government in part for her work coordinating antimicrobial stewardship initiatives. She now works at the Australian Government's science agency, CSIRO, as the Lead for Animal Health and Environment in the Minimising AMR Consortium.